He clicked delete. Now, they no longer existed.

Takano Yusuke made her way slowly down the hall, clutching her notebook close to her chest. A gentle hand rested on her shoulder and she looked up to see Hiko Hanabira, a longtime friend that made her relax some.

"I don't know why you're so worried," Hanabira smiled as she guided her young friend down the hall. "It's just another class."

"Yes, but there are rumors Lieutenant Colonel Ichinose Gurren will actually be there for class today," Yusuke replied, bringing back the nerves. "Why would he choose today to show up unless it's important?"

"We're going to class just for show," Hanabira reminded her. "If it's important to the class, it has nothing to do with us."

"And that's where you're wrong," came a familiar voice from behind. The two girls whipped around to see Gurren standing over them, his sharp eyes focusing on Hanabira. "You two follow me."

They exchanged worried glances before quickly following the colonel. He passed by their classroom, drawing the stares of the other students already seated. Yusuke offered them a shrug before they were out of sight. Not long after, they arrived at Gurren's office where eight other people were waiting.

"Sada-san?" Yusuke approached the girl she recognized.

"Hey," Sada said with a small smile.

"Good, looks like all the delinquents are here," Gurren mumbled as he sat behind his desk. Yusuke raised her eyebrows at the colonel but said nothing.

"What are we here for, exactly?" asked boy with curly black hair. Yusuke knew he was a classmate of hersâ€|Kyushichi?

"I have new students coming in today," Gurren explained. Everybody in the room looked at each other. What did new students have to do with them? "Judging by the looks on your faces, none of you have realized what you all have in common."

"We're classmates, that's all," Kyushichi shrugged. He looked around the room, waiting for someone to argue with him.

"Yusuke and I are close friends," Hanabira added. "But the rest of youâ€|I have no clue."

Gurren released a heavy sigh. "All of you have been with the army for a while. All of you already have demon weapons."

A gasp echoed through the room.

"You're all elites already," Gurren continued. "So because of this, I'll put into teams. I have a special mission for you all."

"And this mission has something to do with why we can't meet the new student," Hanabira sighed. "I knew we'd get caught up in something stupid."

"I have the squads listed here," Gurren continued, ignoring Hanabira's interruption. "These squads were already in the system, so if anyone asks, act like a team. Squad leader for the first team is Muramoto Sada.

"Team two squad leader is Mano Ebizo."

"What?" Kyushichi yelled. "How come I'm not a squad leader? I've been here for eight years! I know for a fact those two are younger than me!"

"I've been here just as long as you have," Ebizo said, running his fingers through his thin, dirty blonde hair. "But just because you're older does not mean wiser."

Gurren laughed. "We have no time for these arguments but Mano is right. Let me continue please."

Kyushichi clenched his fists but remained silent. Yusuke thought he looked pretty beat up about it but Gurren hadn't made a wrong choice as long as she'd known him.

"Muramoto Sada, you're squad is Ide Kyushichi, Shintani Chikuma, Akiwa Akiko, and Takano Yusuke."

Yusuke's face went pale. She turned to Hanabira who also looked like she'd seen a ghost. They were extremely close and would have helped the teams seem more natural. Yusuke wasn't about to argue with the Lieutenant Colonel though.

"Mano Ebizo, your squad is Hiko Hanabira, Okumura Takashi, Takamoto Norihide and Meiyo Senshi."

Ebizo nodded and turned towards his team with a proud smile as did

Sada. Everyone casually moved towards the teams until they were evenly split.

"You all can get to know each other later," Gurren said before introductions could start. "Right now, I need you all to listen to me and listen to me well. No one can know about the mission I'm about to give you."

"Not even Lieutenant General Hiragi Shinya?" Yusuke piped up. Everyone looked at her. She knew a Hiragi.

"No," Gurren said quickly. "He already knows. "He can't get his nose out anyone's business. That aside, I need you to move away from here, Northwest towards Niigata first. Then make your way to Fukushima."

"Why?" Sada asked.

"We're not paying enough attention in those areas and I can't get Hiragi to change his mind," he replied. His eyes fell to Takashi which drew everyone else's attention. He blushed. "You know why we need to watch all fronts. And why you can't meet the new student."

"No, I don't think I do," Takashi said quickly, avoiding everyone's eyes.

"We don't have time for this bullshit," Gurren snapped. "Explain it to your teammates and if you need help, Meiyo knows took. Shintani, you inform your squad leader." He stood from his desk. "I'll be late if I don't hurry. I have an informant for you but you need to head out immediately to catch him. He'll tell you the rest and give individual orders."

He brushed passed the astonished cadets. Everyone watched him leave the office and disappear down the hall.

"That's just like him, isn't it?" Yusuke sighed.

"But you heard him," Sada said, shooting a sharp glare towards her team. "We need to head out immediately. We should find his informant before making our way to Niigata."

"Something's off about this whole thing," Chikuma piped in.

"You'd know more about it than us," Sada replied.

"Yeah, what do you guys know?" Ebizo asked, looking between Takashi, Senshi and Chikuma. "He told you to explain."

"Maybe we should do that outside," Kyushichi snapped. "He did say immediately."

Sada nodded, not mentioning his attitude. She didn't wait for the others as she ran out of the office. Yusuke shrugged and followed her followed by Kyushichi, Chikuma and Akiko. Ebizo and his squad left shortly after.

They would find out Gurren's plans soon enough.
